

Mike Kelly is currently Chairman of the Board of the Bow River Basin Council and conducts various consulting work on topics where he can add value. He retired from TransAlta where he was head of Environment, Health and Safety and Water Resource Development as well as Vice President of the Alberta Water Council representing industrial interests. Mike has worked in the area of environment-economy linkages on issues ranging from consensus decision-making and organizational structure, to fisheries, wildlife, agricultural practices, air quality, climate change, power generation, and international trade. He has degrees in psychology and political science from the University of Iowa and lives in Cochrane, Alberta.